

Preparing For...

The end of the financial year

As we approach the end of this financial year, it is common for organisations to need to use their remaining budget before the beginning of April. To support our customers, we have put together a list of considerations for when deciding on how best to invest this remaining budget.

How does quality medicines training from OPUS benefit my organisation?

When deciding what training is going to be most impactful, it is essential to look at the bigger picture of what value medicines training can bring to your staff, as well as your organisation as a whole.

To help you understand what training is going to bring the most value to your organisation over the coming year, we have put together a checklist of things to consider about the upcoming training needs of your organisation.

Training Needs Checklist

1	Have you identified clear training pathways for every level of staff in your organisation to follow? Is any training missing? Are there any gaps?
2	Will there be new staff members joining your organisation who will need essential medicines training in order to undertake their role?
3	Will any staff members have certificates expiring this year, who will need refresher training to remain compliant?
4	Will you be competency assessing all staff annually, as a minimum , as required by Skills for Care?
5	Will staff require training on particular medicines or medical conditions to enable them to provide exceptional person-centred care to the people they support?
6	Is anyone due to join your organisation who will need support with a new medicine or medical condition that staff are not yet trained on?
7	Are there any Managers/ Senior Staff you wish to upskill to be able to competency assess their staff and/or understand how to undertake effective outcome-based audit?
8	Are there senior staff you wish to upskill with further knowledge and skills to increase their confidence and competence in their role e.g. Transcribing, Safe Handling of Medicines Intermediate Course?
